Norway and Vicinity
Steve Cummings delights in gazing at the stars and his photographs of them. He exhibits the pictures and is most enthusiastic over them than he is over the quality of birch coming into the mill yard.

V. P. Lincoln of Brunswick sells the latest pocket-hair-restorer used so much by E. A. Greenleaf and Mrs. C. W. Leavitt Co. The Lincoln has been in the past week getting testimonials of the wonderful hair-growing, moistening, freckle removing qualities of the hair-restorer. His hair is so thick and healthy that he has made his "great stuff," he says.

Miss Alice Marion Bartlett, daughter of the late Dr. Herman L. Bartlett and Mrs. Edith Stearns Bartlett, was born in Norway about twenty years ago and resided here until soon after her graduation from the Norway High School in 1921.

Miss Bartlett has been known in the community as a typical athletic girl. At an early age she could handle the horses in her father's stable, and early mastered the automobile when Dr. Bartlett changed his mode of travel to gas power. Swimming or boating became a pastime, and school she was prominent in basketball and enjoyed the thrill of the footlights while playing in the various school dramatics.

During the past few years she has attended the Leslie School at Cambridge, Mass., and obtained a diploma at the Cambridge College in Indianapolis, Ind.

Miss Bartlett is a successful teacher in the Parker School, Needham, Mass., where she and her mother are comfortably situated, returning there Sunday, after the Christmas holidays here with relatives and friends.

Cold Wave Landed Strong
Another cold wave galloping across the country landed here, Sunday, for a short time. The advance agent arrived late Saturday and started the mercury down to 20 below zero. The cold wave was a stiff breeze and it seemed much colder.

Sunday morning ten below zero was the average with a near-zero temperature until sunset, then the mercury slumped rapidly.

Monday morning the readings were from 20 to 25 below the epher according to location. Fortunately there was no wind and we squeezed through with out great suffering.

Some nearby towns report temperature at 30 and more below zero.

Volley ball is a popular sport at the Methodist church on Monday and Wednesday evenings of every week. A court is located in the vestry with the windows protected from damage. The game is said to be developing some clever players and a strong social atmosphere.

Garage business is good especially the gas oil, "valley" and chain part. Many automobiles have braved low temperature while taking advantage of excellent wheeling.

C. E. Webber, local agent of the Nissin Baking Co., of Portland, reports selling an average of five hundred dollars worth of their products on his route.

Morrill Greenleaf has made a rapid recovery from the fire and the Greenleafs has resumed business at the old stand.

Ralph Kneeland, the popular backstop with the Twin Towns baseball team, is visiting L. H. Cushman and family. He is teaching at Middletown, Conn.

Louise P. Sweet and wife of Bangor visited Benj. Sweet and family of South Paris, recently. Louise looked up and called on old friends and associates while Benj. Sweet forgot the Wearies. He is agent of the Company at Bangor and so prospering.

Geo. H. Bennett has been stripping skis at the W. E. Tubbs Co. during the absence of Chester Record.

Higgin's Academy is home for the Maine School of Commerce for the holiday recess.

Mrs. June Leavitt has moved her dress-making rooms from Mrs. W. H. Kilgore's house to a front room over the A. L. Clark Drug Co.

"Picture Bill" DeCroteau on his Christmas trip here placed a musical comedy for the Twin Town Athletic Association, to be presented the last of February. A local cast will be picked and a large chorus assembled before the director arrives.

Prof. Elmer Watson of North Stratford, N. H., visited his mother, Mrs. Alice Watson, and his brothers on the farm over the holidays. He is doing well with his school in the north country. His life is insured in the Union Central Insurance Co. and he has little to fear. He is a Bates College graduate.

Several "Aggie" students of Norway High School are spending part of the vacation holidays at the Western Maine Poultry Association Premium List. They are gaining experience in this branch of poultry industry besides boosting the show. The class probably will enter a pen of Rhode Island Reds in the egg laying contest, to be selected from the experimental flock kept at the Agricultural department.

Shaw's orchestra has been engaged to play at the Rex on an evening in January when one of the big screen productions is to be shown.

Eighty couples attended the Christmas night dances at Norway Opera House, the majority being young people from home college. Shaw's orchestra furnished music and kept the merry-makers on the move until midnight.

Mrs. Mattie Blake, the aged lady who was removed from Mrs. Sadie Miller's home during the Sunday fire, is recovering from the experience well as usual. Mrs. Miller's daughter, Doris, and Mrs. Blake will occupy a room at A. C. Hollingsworth's Cottage street, when the insurance on the household goods is adjusted.

Colby Robinson, manager of Rex Theatre, went to Boston, Saturday, returning Monday.

Ernest DeCroteau's shoulder, dislocated in a fall at the Hathaway block, is improving rapidly and will soon be as good as new.

Scott Palmer—"Shiners are selling pretty well but everybody has gone into the live bait business. Just like every thing else, when one gets a fairly good thing there are forty after it and the crowd is skinned."

Walter Farnham has moved his family into A. P. Bassett's cottage in Central Park South Paris.

The Hathaway block is being repaired and the second story and roof will be made as good as new.

In spite of the cold and variable conditions, many storekeepers report a business equal to better than last year. Traffic was not brisk until a few days before Christmas, when shoppers arrived and clerks were busy.

Obituary

Lucius H. Denison

The death of Lucius H. Denison, a former resident of Norway, occurred at his home in Orefield, Nebraska, Monday morning, following a long period of failing health. As Mr. Denison's boyhood and young manhood were passed in Norway, he always claimed Norway as his native place although he was born in Chelsea, Mass., July 7, 1858. His parents were Lucius and Adeline (Hobart) Denison, who came to Norway in 1881 and lived in what is known as the Denison house. Mr. Denison acquired his education in the schools of Norway, teaching in the Norway High School, and was a member of the Norway Baptist Church. He was married in 1880 to Emma Badger of that city. After several years they went to Orefield, where Mr. Denison was employed in the bank. Later years they lived at Boulder and Friend, and returned to Chelsea a few months ago and Mr. Denison has been very happy there in renewing old acquaintances.

His visits to Maine have been at intervals since he went west, and during the summer of 1923 he, with Mrs. Denison, his youngest daughter, Ruth, were in Maine for an extended visit with relatives in Portland, Hallowell, Norway, and in the latter place, Mr. Denison saw many of his former school friends. It was hoped the change would prove beneficial and for a time he seemed to improve but he was obliged to retire from active business some months ago.

He was affiliated with the Masonic bodies and was active in the orders. He was also a member of the Eastern Star. Mr. Denison leaves his widow, two sons and two daughters, also two sisters, Mrs. Amos L. Millet of Portland and Mrs. Charles G. Blake of Norway, and one brother, Herbert H. Denison of Harrison.

NEW E. T. PAULL MARCH POPULAR
"Four Horsemen" Based on Theme from Book of Revelation

"The Four Horsemen" by E. T. Paull's new descriptive march, has been widely acclaimed as his masterpiece. Based upon the theme as described in the Book of Revelation, the story evolves upon the prophetic vision of St. John at the "Four Horsemen," the first riding a white horse indicating "peace, prosperity and happiness." The second rider, with sword in hand, mounted on a red horse, representing the rider of war, bloodshed and murder. The third rider, on a black horse signifies depression, sadness and sorrow, while finally a pale horse and rider symbolizes famine, terror and death, generally known as "Death on a White Horse."

The story is set to music that admirably illustrates and conveys the ideas and characteristics of the four horsemen. It is extremely versatile in nature, ranging from the soft and sweet melody-interpreting joy and happiness—to strong and powerful strains—visualizing war and its horrors.

"The Four Horsemen" published by E. T. Paull Music Co. of New York City.
N. Y., gives every promise of being E. T.
Paull's greatest contribution to his popular series of descriptive marches, a number of which have become famous the world over including "Ben Hur Chariot Race," "Burning of Rome" and Napoleon's Last Charge.

BUILDING OUT THE RAT

Eradication of rats, mice and other pests should be included in every program of improved sanitation. They are not only destructive to food and property but are also definitely responsible for the spread of certain filth diseases. The United States Department of Agriculture, in Farmers' Bulletin 896, says:
"It (the rat) carries bubonic plague and many other diseases fatal to man, and has been responsible for more untimely deaths among human beings than all the wars of history."

A single surviving pair of rats breeding under favorable conditions, will increase to over 350,000,000 individuals in three years.

The cost of rat-proofing is small compared with the saving effected, and often the details of construction in a new building can be so arranged as to include thorough rat-proofing at no additional expense. In old buildings usually only minor changes of a simple nature are involved to make them rat-proof. The policy of rat-proofing should be consis-ent; all the buildings of a group must have incorporated in them the essential elements of practical rat-proofing, if the greatest benefits are to be realized from it.

Concrete used in foundations, walls and floors is effective in the exclusion of vermin. It is equally well adapted for this purpose on both new and old buildings. Rat proofing of new can well be accomplished by following these suggestions:

1. Make continuous concrete foundations, extend at least to a point below burrowing depth—about 24 inches; for buildings with a basement, the foundation walls—will usually extend considerably deeper than this.

2. Let the concrete extend at least 18 inches above the ground line to discourage the gnawing which is common at this place.

3. When posts or piers are used as supports make these high enough to raise building at least 18 inches off the ground if the building is 30 feet wide or less, increasing the height 6 inches for each additional 10 feet in width. This discourage rats from using the space beneath the floor as a shelter. If the space between the piers is walled up, windows or screened openings as large as practical should be provided to admit light to the enclosure from at least three sides.

4. Use concrete floors wherever possible. These may be laid directly upon well-drained, well-packed soil or upon a base of compacted cinders.

5. All necessary openings should be protected with 1-4 inch, 12-gauge wire screen. Doors should be provided with spring hinges to insure their automatic closing. Leave no doors, windows, or other openings unprotected.

Old buildings present different problems, but their solution is not difficult.
The following points should be emphasized:

1. Locate a new continuous 4-inch concrete foundation wall, alongside the old wall, either outside or inside, as most convenient.

2. Replace old wood floors with new ones of concrete.

3. Pack concrete in the space between joists and studs, at each floor level.

4. Screen all openings as recommended for new construction.

HOME EDUCATION

Your Children's Belongings
We hear a great deal about the Farmer who gives his children calves and pigs and takes them away when these animals are grown. For years, people have been writing about this. There are other injustices which no one thinks much about, yet they are just as serious because the same kind of principle is there.

I allude to the cool way with which the mother frequently takes a gift received by one child and gives it to another. A child—has some right! Once he has given you something, something, even if it be but a doll, this becomes hers forever, unless she herself chooses to give it away.

I recall a child of six to whom I gave several small presents. As soon as she returned home, her mother took them away to give them to a younger sister.

Very frequently, an older girl is told to give something to the baby to stop its crying. This is not good for the older child. It makes her look on the baby as an enemy from whom her things must be hidden. It certainly is not good for the baby, because it makes her think that anything will be given her, provided she cries loudly enough for it.

What sense of justice can our children have in later years, when they are bought up in this manner?

Once when I gave a present to a little girl, it seemed that other people had given her things and she had not been allowed to keep them. "Is it for me to keep?"

There was another child to whom I gave a doll. I knew she had been longing for one for years, yet when I gave it to her, instead of being delighted as I had told her she would be, she looked at me sadly, while two great tears rolled rolly down her cheeks.

"What is it?" I asked. "Do you not want the doll?"

"O, I do!" she cried, "but Helen has no doll, and they will give this to her as soon as they see it."

It was only by giving Helen another doll that I could induce the mother to allow the older sister to keep hers.

A child's mind is easily influenced and it is white one is still very young, and most easily implanted. Later on, there will be many things that we shall try to teach, and those first impressions will either help or hinder.

It is of home that a child should be taught his first moral lessons. What mother is fit to teach if she be not fair?

Even a very little child should be taught to respect his brother's and sister's toys. If an older sister lends a toy to a younger one, the latter should be taught to be extra careful of the toy because it "belongs to Big Sister."

Each child should have a place for his own toys, and these should not be lent out indiscriminately by the parent especially while the owner is away at school. I have seen mothers lend toys to a younger child, and when the older child returns, they should not be lent to him.

I have known the big children to hide their things away "in case Mother might give them to Baby" in their absence.

It is easy to see that no true love can grow up between mother and child under such conditions. Mothers should teach to all their children and not show favoritism. Above all, Mothers should teach the little ones as early as possible the difference between "mine" and "thine."

Old story: Elzeher, colored, was attempting to explain to a friend the meaning of the word alibi. "An alibi is something to prove that you was in a church when you wasn't and wasn't in the church house when you was," he declared.

So many men do something fine, and then become nuisances through conceit.

Mrs. Ashcroft's Remarkable

Covington, Ky.—"I was so weak and because of the bearing-down pains in my back and abdomen.

I sat down most of medicines was put

saw how the Vegetable Compound had helped others so I gave it a trial. I had to take about a dozen bottles before I gained my strength but I certainly praise this medicine.
Then I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood medicine for poor blood. I was cold all the time. I would be so cold I could hardly sit still and in the palms of my hands there would be drops of sweat.

recommend it also. You may publish

PRECAUTIONS AGAINST RABIES

A little while ago several dogs died in extreme western part of the state of symptoms indicating rabies. This disease is transmitted from animal to animal and from animal to man by infectious mouth secretions—almost always in this country by the bites of rabid dogs. Once the primary symptoms show themselves, a fatal termination is inevitable from a death that is agonizing and heart-rending to behold.

While the mad race of rabid animals has carried this infection from the east, west, Maine has been fortunate, indeed, in escaping it so long. Even in some of our New England states rabies, in the last years, been a matter of serious concern.

In some cases the animal passes quickly from the first stage into the third or the paralytic stage; thus presenting what is called dumb rabies. If a person has been bitten by a dog supposed to be rabid it is emphatically a life or a death question as to whether the bitten person should have been quickly and as far as possible, if not at once, taken to a hospital. If rabies, the disease, is not treated, a load of intense anxiety is thrown overboard. If rabies, the disease, is not treated, a load of intense anxiety is thrown overboard.

Another strong reason for not killing the dog is that certain germs which are characteristic of rabies, the rabid bodies, very often, when the dog is killed at too early a stage, have not developed and it is impossible for the laboratory workers to answer the question: Was it rabies?

A person who has been bitten by a dog in which there is the least reason to suspect that he is infected with rabies should be promptly taken to a hospital where the wound may be cauterized in a way which will give the greatest assurance of safety; but, even with the most thorough treatment of the wound in this way, absolute safety cannot be guaranteed.

The second step in the treatment for assuring safety of the bitten person is the Pasteur treatment. Rabies in human beings is so agonizing an affliction, and has been known to be so absolutely incurable, that the period of temporizing has developed, very short. Cauterization of the wound lessens the danger very much, but should not be thought to suffice unless the developments during the few days, while the dog is under observation, indicate that the dog was not infected with rabies and the results of the laboratory investigations confirm this opinion.

If the dog at the time he inflicted the bite was known to be rabid, or if he develops symptoms of rabies within his period of quarantine for observation, or if, in the examination of the brain and spinal cord the Negri bodies are found, there will be an absolute need of beginning the Pasteur treatment as early as possible. If the bite was received in a district in which there had been cases of rabies and was inflicted by a dog of which no definite information can be had as to whether he was rabid, the taking of the treatment would be the much safer course. The degree of safety conferred by the Pasteur treatment is a very close approach to absolute immunity. The recent improvements in it have cut down the death rate from 15 to 30 per cent. to 1 to 3 per thousand of persons bitten.

Formerly patients were rushed to Pasteur Institutes, but, with the rabies vaccine as it is now supplied by the leading commercial laboratories, the treatment can be given by any physician at his office or at the home of the patient. The Office of Rabies may be had from the Office of the State Department of Health. It is going to every local health officer and physician.

KEEPING MUM
Last spring a case of small pox was reported from Bangor and two days later a second case. A prompt investigation by the Health Department disclosed the fact that a lumber operator had been having the disease in his camp for some time had been "keeping mum". Without word of warning he broke camp and forty old men, scattered themselves over the state and some to their homes in Canada. Rapid men, notifying the destination of these health officers, resulted in a smaller number of subsequent cases than was expected. Yet it caused much trouble and expense, particularly in the towns and cities in which the cases of small pox appeared.

The action of this man was very different from that shown by lumber operators generally in the past when smallpox has appeared in their camps or threatened to invade their premises. Almost invariably they have given prompt notice of even suspicious cases, have put sick men into small isolation camps and, as soon as possible, have been sent to them, the men have been vaccinated, have been put under a medical quarantine, but have continued their work and infected others in mild cases long before they have ceased to be infectious. This policy, however, was quickly to be best for all hands, was warmly approved by the lumbermen.

The Public Health Council of the State Department of Health at one of its meetings passed a resolution recommending these rules provide that:

Whenever, in an organized township, any lumber operator, boss, manager or other person who has charge of any lumber operation, lumber camp or of any mill, river, driving crew, or of a number of persons living or working together, he shall promptly notify the State Department of Health of the presence of the disease or of his suspicion that it is present. The notification of the State Department of Health shall include the number of persons sick or affected with the disease, the location of the camp, crew, and information about the best route to travel to reach the case or cases in question.

It shall also be the duty of any person in charge of any household, camp or crew to do promptly everything possible to prevent the further spread of the disease or of the infection thereof.

BOLSTER'S MILLS

Mrs. Sarah Chase Weston
December eighteenth at the home of her daughter in Berlin, N. H., Sarah Chase Weston, widow of the late James Wendall Weston, passed away from this life to the one beyond. The deceased was born in Portland, June second, eight hundred forty-seven, the eighth child of Daniel and Betsy (Fernald) Chase. At birth, eighteen hundred sixty-seven she was married to James Wendall Weston of Harrison, Maine, and they went to live on the Weston farm, residing there until his death, July twenty-fifth, nineteen hundred fourteen. Since then she has lived in the house winters and last March depleted her strength and caused almost continuous pain during two weeks in August. This affliction, regardless of this she made the trip from her old home to Berlin, December second, with her newly gained energy, and where she seemingly gained each day, with her sight returning gradually. Wednesday morning, December seventh she fell ill with inflammation of the gall bladder, a malady from which she had suffered infrequently attacks during the past few years. The intense pain and the great fear for her weakened condition sleeping at half past one Thursday afternoon, December eighteenth.

Her death marks the passing of the last link around Weston Hill where she was in sickness or sorrow. In her earlier days she was a ready helper in the church of Maple Ridge and Bolster's Mills, and when the latter was rebuilt, two years ago, she gave a window in memory of the W. C. T. U., an organization which she had interest to the last.

A prayer service by Rev. E. W. Moore was held Saturday afternoon, December twentieth at her daughter's home in Berlin and funeral services were at her son's home in Bolster's Mills, Sunday afternoon, December twenty-first, Rev. W. C. Cole of Gorham, Maine, officiating. The floral tributes from the church, W. C. T. U. and new acquaintances of Berlin added their breath of friendship to the love offerings of relatives and old friends. An older sister, Harriet Chase Burnham, of Gloucester, Mass., and three children, Albert W., of Bolster's Mills, Lester S. of Mechanic Falls and Mrs. Mark A. Twitwell of Berlin, N. H., cherish the memory of a sister and mother.
